SOUTH DAKOTA CODIFIED LAW 20-9-12 TO 20-9-18

WARNING-Under South Dakota law, an owner of property, including lands and waters, who charges individuals an admission price or fee to participate in an agritourism activity on the owner's property, is not liable for injury to or death of a participant in the agritourism activity or damage to the participant's property of the injury or damage resulted from an inherent risk of the agritourism activity. Inherent risks are conditions, dangers, or hazards that are an integral part of the land used for agritourism activity, including surface and subsurface conditions and natural conditions of the land, vegetation, and waters; the behavior of wild or domestic animals; the ordinary dangers of structures or equipment ordinarily used in farming or ranching operations when such structures or equipment are used for farming or ranching purposes; and the potential for you or another participant to act in a negligent way that may contribute to your injury, death or damages. You are assuming the risk of participating in the agritourism activity for which you are entering on or using the owner's land.

INFORMED CONSENT, INDEMNIFICATION, WAIVER AND RELEASE OF LIABILITY

Hunting, by its very nature, can be hazardous. To insure a safe hunt, every person involved must use the utmost care at all times. South Dakota law provides that each hunter is liable for his or her own actions or neglect, stating in SDCL 41-9-9 that: "Any person who is engaged, legally or illegally, in hunting is liable for any injury or death to any person or damages to property caused by the hunter's negligent actions."

As such, each hunter is responsible for his or her own actions, and it is each hunter that owes a duty of care to all others. Because of that, it is imperative that you understand and fully comply with the universal gun safety rules, as follow:

- 1. Learn the Mechanical Characteristics of Your Firearm - It is important to become thoroughly acquainted with the firearm you intend to use. Know its mechanical characteristics as well as the methods of loading, unloading and carrying it safely. Read the owner's manual for your firearm.
- 2. Treat Every Firearm As If It Were Loaded - If you treat every firearm, even the ones you know are unloaded, with the same degree of care that you would when it is loaded, you will not only avoid lapsing into bad habits, but you will also set the best example to everyone around you.
- 3. Always! Point the Muzzle in a Safe Direction - The rule of thumb is that a "Safe Direction" is any direction that will produce no damage or injury should the firearm discharge.
- 4. Keep Your Finger Off the Trigger - Until you are actually ready to shoot, the safest place for your trigger finger is off the trigger and resting alongside the trigger guard. The trigger has one purpose: to fire the gun.

5. Never Rely on a Mechanical Safety - Never use a safety as a substitute for safe handling practices. Like any mechanical device, a mechanical safety might break or fail.

6. Keep Gun Unloaded and Action Open Until Ready to Shoot - A firearm should always be kept unloaded until it is being used, whether at the range or prior to taking to the field in pursuit of wild game. Under no circumstance is it necessary to keep a firearm loaded before a hunt begins, after a hunt ends, or while in a vehicle of any kind.

7. Know Your Target and What's Beyond It - Whether on the range, in the field, or in the midst of a life-threatening situation, you must be absolutely certain of your target and the background beyond. If you don't know what your bullet will strike, don't shoot.

8. Use Only the Correct Ammunition for Your Firearm - Always be sure the ammunition you are carrying is correct for the firearm you intend to use. Never carry mixed ammunition by caliber or gauge.

9. Know What to Do in the Event of a Misfire - When a cartridge fails to fire, for whatever reason, remember to keep the muzzle pointed in a safe direction and never put your face close to the breech. Carefully open the action, unload the firearm and dispose of the faulty cartridge in a safe manner.

10. Wear Protective Equipment - Use of shatterproof protective glasses and hearing protection is strongly advised, and could save your vision and hearing. In addition, hunter blaze orange clothing will help insure your safety while in the field.

11. Keep Firearm Free from Obstructions and Well Maintained - Always open the action and check to insure that no ammunition is in the chamber or magazine, and that nothing is obstructing the barrel bore. Even small amounts of oil, grease, mud, dirt, or snow can cause extreme and dangerous pressures to build that can cause an injury to you or a companion.

12. Do Not Mix Guns With Alcohol, Drugs, Or Fatigue - Alcohol, drugs and fatigue impair your judgment and your behavior, and they exponentially increase the likelihood of an accident.

In addition to the handling of guns and ammunition, hunting can be dangerous due to hazards of the land itself and hazards associated with farming or ranching operations. While hunting, remember the following:

1. Unimproved land may contain hidden hazards – Land suitable for agriculture and hunting by its nature may contain hidden obstacles, slippery surfaces, rocks and holes that lead to unstable footing. Use caution when negotiating the terrain!
2. Agricultural land may contain domestic livestock or wild animals that may be dangerous if approached. Stay away from animals not intended as a hunting quarry and observe carefully the behavior of any animal in the vicinity. In the event that any animal acts strangely or aggressively, move away carefully and report the situation to the land owner or operator.
3. Farm and ranching operations use machinery that is dangerous! Keep away from all moving machinery and equipment, and do not operate or climb on equipment at any time.
